

THE POP MUSIC ANTHOLOGY: LEGACIES AND LOST HITS

www.popmusicanthology.com

Top-Ranked Songs by Year (as of April 2025)
based on a combination of Hit Factor and Legacy Factor

Key:

= Overall Rank, based on the total points achieved by both between initial popularity (Hit Factor) and staying power over time (Legacy Factor).

Chart = Peak position at time of initial popularity, one important piece of the data that goes into the Hit Factor.

- “1(13)” = #1 for 13 weeks. Weeks at peak position are shown for songs that peaked at #1 or #2.
- Data from 1940-1942 is from Billboard’s Top Sellers chart.
- Data from 1943-1958 is from a reconstructed popmusicanthology chart incorporating the Country and R&B charts along with the Pop chart.
- Data from 1958-1991 is from the Billboard Hot 100.
- Data from 1992 through the present is from a reconstructed popmusicanthology chart. In the 1990s, many hit songs were not eligible for the Billboard Hot 100 because they were not commercially available as singles. This reconstructed chart seeks to correct that oversight, but it goes on to balance pop radio airplay, airplay from other radio formats, singles sales, and online streams in a formula that hopefully better captures songs’ overall popularity through a time of rapid change in the music industry.

Legacy = % of total points achieved through ongoing Spotify performance. This can be thought of as each song’s resiliency over time. The most well-balanced songs—that is, the songs you can expect to be as popular as they are now, based on how popular they were then—will come closest to 50%. This happens more readily with more recent hits; in the most recent years shown, the Legacy column is removed because not enough time has passed to yield valuable data.

Songs highlighted in red show a Legacy Factor below 20%. These are “lost songs”—popular at the time, but not being streamed much today.

Songs highlighted in green show a Legacy Factor of at least 80%. These are “found songs”—not as popular at the time (or at least not well chronicled), but very well remembered today, at least among the audience that is still streaming them on Spotify.

Also shown in the following pages are charts of the Lost Hits of the 1960s, 1970s, 1980s, 1990s, and 2000s: the songs with the lowest Legacy Factor relative to their Hit Factor.
